

Trustee

The Money and Mental Health Policy Institute is an independent charity, conducting research and developing practical policy solutions to break the devastating link between financial difficulty and mental health problems. Founded in 2016, in our first year we have established a reputation as a respected voice in policy debates and our work has received significant media attention.

We are now looking to add to our volunteer Board of Trustees, chaired by Martin Lewis, appointing someone with a background in finance or accounting at a senior level. This is an exciting opportunity to help grow the impact and influence of an innovative, effective organisation, and make a real difference to the lives of millions of people living with, or at risk of, mental health problems.

We are looking for someone able to help shape the finance and governance of this young organisation. Trustees meetings are held quarterly in central London, but Trustees may need to be available occasionally between meetings to provide support and challenge to the executive team.

Applicants should have a real passion for all the issues on which the Institute works.
